Why is interest in Open Dialogue growing so fast in the UK? What is the experience of Open Dialogue actually like? Is it relevant for you - should you be getting involved? This is a day for anyone wanting answers to these questions, and suitable for professionals of all disciplines, those who commission services, people with personal experience of psychosis or family members, and anyone trying to support people experiencing psychosis.

As well as covering the principles of Open Dialogue, recent UK developments, and the planned UK wide research programme, speakers will talk about their personal experience of: dialogical practice as client, family member and practitioner; participating in Open Dialogue in Norway; participating in UK training in Open Dialogue, with perspectives from a peer support worker and a psychiatrist; obtaining funding for Open Dialogue developments in the current climate of austerity.

There will be opportunity for first hand experience of dialogical practice. Please note: participant numbers will be limited to make this a worthwhile experience.
